JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

"Please settle an argument on the play of the accompanying hand," requests a Birmingham correspondent. "West opened five of spades, and the question was whether declarer should play a low card or the jack from the dummy."

"When the hand was actually played, South put up dummy's jack of spades in the hope that West was leading from the king queen. East covered with the king of spades, and South won at once with the ace."

"South then entered dummy with the queen of clubs to lead the nine of diamonds for a finesse. West won with the king of diamonds and ran the spades, defeating the contract."

"South said that he had made the right play, even though it had turned out badly. Is this correct?"

No. The percentage play is a low spade, not the jack.

South has nothing to worry about if the spades are 4-3, or if the king of diamonds happens to be in the East hand. South must guard against a five-card suit with the king of diamonds.
