JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Vulnerability has an important effect on your willingness to bid at the sacrifice level.
In today's hand, for example, West must decide whether or not to bid five diamonds when South slabs at four hearts, and South is influenced by the vulnerability.
West can't tell what will happen to five diamonds. (It can be made by careful play, as the cards lie, but from West's point of view it is a very unsound contract.)
He has a defensive trick or two against four hearts, and his partner may turn up with enough to beat that contract. It is all very borderlinish, and with equal vulnerability (or, certainly, if West were non-vulnerable against vulnerable opponents) West would bid five diamonds. With unfavorable vulnerability, West passes.
Four hearts should be made by South if he merely plays the hand like a bridge player. West wins the first trick with the king of diamonds and shifts to a trump p. This gives South his chance to show whether or not he is a bridge player.
The correct play is to win the first trump in the South hand even though dummy's eight is good enough to hold the trick. And then South must lead his singleton club towards dummy's king.
