Wisconsin to Be Test Area in Army Manpower Plan

WASHINGTON (UP) — Six states, including Wisconsin, are participating in an Army experiment started Friday to coordinate its reserve forces and provide a ready-to-go manpower pool in case of an emergency.

For the next six months, draftees finishing their two-year service will be assigned to "mobilization" duty. This will not involve actual service, but merely a paper assignment to some specific Army, Reserve, or National Guard unit.

Men tapped for the experiment will get a year knocked off their six-year reserve obligation. Should mobilization come, they would go at once to their assigned unit. Otherwise they would do nothing until the assignment period is up.

The program will work two ways. Non-combat veterans will be given mobilization assignments in active Army units or installations for one year.

Combat veterans, and men with reserve service, will be given four-year mobilization assignments in National Guard or Army reserve units.

This would make non-combat veterans more liable to recall in event of war than those with combat service. The National Guard and Reserve units would be less likely to go into immediate action in event of emergency.

One state in each of six Army areas is taking part in the experiment. Besides Wisconsin, they are New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Texas, and Washington.

The Army has said that if the trial period is successful, the program will be adopted generally.

THAT'S GRATITUDE

WINDSOR, Conn. (UP)—After setting up some hazards in her home for Girl Scouts to spot during a safety demonstration, Mrs. Ellie Zwirner was chagrined when they reported more than she had planted.

At the Shows

Parkway

FEATURE: Walking My Baby Back Home

TYPE: Musical

CAST: Jigger Millard, Donald O'Connor; Chris Hale, Janet Leigh;

REVIEWER: Wally Wikoff

STORY: The son of a famed piano manufacturer tries to find a new dance style for his post-war band. His strictly "400" family, however, thinks he is studying for the concert stage. . . When a grandfather's will specifies he must perform on the concert stage to collect $100,000, Jigger has to choose between the concert and the gang which stuck with him . . . , the answer is all but obvious.

HIGH POINTS: O'Connor, still one of the most versatile performers in Hollywood, has a good script and dance routine to work with not to mention the luscious Janet Leigh for a dance partner . . . a light, happy film without much pretense of studied plot . . . lot of laughs, especially when Jigger meets his voice teacher.

LOW POINTS: Jigger's army pal, "Blimp" proceeds to be slightly unfunny.

VERDICT: Excellent musical.

ALSO: "The Stand at Apache River," a fast-moving color Western that holds up well on this double-bill.

Madison

FEATURE: The Captain's Paradise

TYPE: British comedy

CAST: Capt. St. James, Alec Guinness; Nita, Yvonne De Carlo; and Maude, Celia Johnson

REVIEWER: Nancy MacWhorter

STORY: That wonderful man is here again. This trip, constraining his penchant for multi-personalities to two roles, Mr. Guinness as Capt. St. James of the Golden Fleece shuttles between Gibraltar and Tangiers, geopraphically, between Mr. Milquetoast and Don Juan, romantically. With the dual responsibilities of a wife in each port, Capt. St. James enjoys what he defines as paradise on earth.

Even paradise on earth is temporal and St. James learns in the hardest way that every woman is complete unto herself. The ending will come as a surprize.

HIGHPOINTS: Capt. St. James, as unlikely a looking samba candidate as there could ever be doing just that . . . First Mate Ricco's visit to "Mon Repos" and discovery that Maude is not the captain's cook . . . St. James' graphic portrayal to wife Nita of the horrible consequences cooking has on a woman's figure and face.

LOW POINTS: Something I can't find in a Guinness comedy.

VERDICT: Less subtle and thus possibly a cut below its predecessors but undoubtedly a very amusing film.

ALSO: Jean Simmons and Stewart Granger in a slow paced comedy called Adam and Evalyn.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

"This hand was played in a duplicate game here," writes a Chicago correspondent, "and most of the declarers misguessed the queen of spades and therefore went down.

"A couple of the misguessers said that they had played the hand the percentage way since the queen is usually behind the jack. Is there anything in this theory?"

Practically nothing. What's more, the theory had nothing to do with this hand.

Suppose you finesse the jack of a suit in a game of rubber bridge. If the finesse wins, the jack and queen are played on different tricks. When the cards are shuffled and dealt for the next hand, the queen is just as likely to be before the jack as behind it.

Now suppose that the finesse of the jack loses to the queen. The two cards are together. If they are not separated in the shuffle, the queen will be dealt behind the jack in the next hand.

For the same reason, the king of a suit is slightly more likely to be behind the queen than in front of it. But this principle applies only in rubber bridge, where the cards are gathered together in tricks and shuffled for the next deal. It doesn't apply at all in tournament bridge, where the cards stay in duplicate boards and where the tricks are not gathered together.

Moreover, even in rubber bridge the principle means very little. There is no way of calculating the chance of finding the queen on one side rather than on the other, since too much depends on how carefully the cards are shuffled.

I conducted some tests a few years ago, however, and came to the conclusion that the odds might be 51 to 49 that the queen was behind the jack, but not any higher than that.

This slight difference is not enough to steer you away from the best line of play. In today's hand you want to win the first spade trick with a high card to guard against a possible singleton queen.

And then you want to be in position to continue a finesse just in case one opponent has four or five spades headed by the queen.

This is possible only if you win the first spade trick with the king and then finesse through West. You can bring in the suit even though West has four spades.

If you win the first spade trick with dummy's ace and then finesse through East, you will be unable to pick up the queen if East happens to have four or five cards in the suit.
