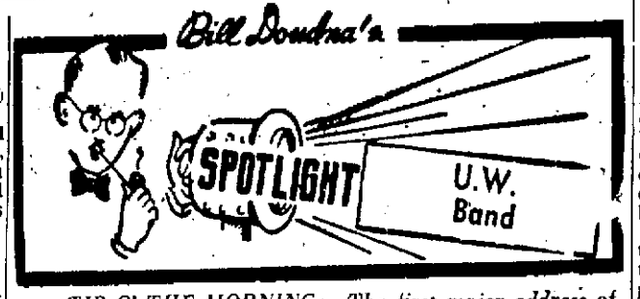
Scouts", Monti's "Czardas,"



TIP O' THE MORNING: The first major address of Chief Justice Earl Warren will be broadcast Thursday night by WIBA and WIBA-FM.

UNUSUAL RHYTHMS WHICH excited rather than confused the listener were on the program which the University of Wisconsin Concert band played Sunday in the Wisconsin Union theater.

They were in Paul Creston's "Legend for Band," which the musicians under Prof. Raymond F. Dvorak played with polish and precision. Described as "one of the most pretentious pieces ever written for band," it emerged rather as an enjoyable excursion into the unusual, at the same time exposing the composer's originality in the use of the band and its instrumentation.

Creston, without getting "pretentious" or grandiose, climaxed the work with full-bodied phrases which were sonorous but didn't blast the customers out of their seats.

Percy Grainger, who had been booked as soloist, was ill in a New York hospital, but sent his regrets, saying that this was only the third time in 61 years of concerts that he had been forced to cancel an engagement.

The band devoted the last half of its program to Grainger works, and used two more as encores — the delightful "Shepherd's Hey" and "Country Gardens," which escaped triteness by a hair; it's too bad one hears it too often.

"The Power of Rome and the Christian Heart" was a powerful piece with surges of sound and almost stunning climaxes.

It used an organ, played by Richard Tappa, and two pianos, played by Julie and Juliette Gerke, as adjuncts to the band. The latter were always a part of the larger organization, but the organ, through no fault of Tappa's, often was an appendage; this was particularly true in the contemplative passages.

The other Grainger works were less successful. "Hill Song No. 2" put its emphasis on unusual sound, and "Marching Song of Democracy" had lost much of its glory in transfer from chorus and orchestra to band and pianos. This, I think, came about because it no longer contrasted human voices with those of instruments. Often it was strident rather than thunderous.

Carl Skowlund, graduate student in music, was the soloist, playing Busser's "Vocalise," which he had arranged for use with band.

Skowlund maintained true trombone tone, keeping its native masculinity instead of making the instrument masquerade (as is often the case) as something else. He followed his expert playing with a lively conducting of his own arrangement of an Italian song.

The program opened with the familiar overture to "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and continued with the "Cortege" from Moussorgsky's "Khovantschina" and an early piece by the same composer, "Scherzo." The first was played with proper somberness and drama, the latter lightly but with a touch of sadness.

The concert was recorded for Grainger—and it ended with a skyrocket for him and the traditional singing and playing of Wisconsin songs.

NEXT: The Ancient Music ensemble, composed of University of Minnesota faculty members, will bring their instruments to the theater Feb. 14 for the next Sunday Music Hour.

POSTPONEMENT: A Vocational school "Workshop Musicale" by Bettina Bjorksten and associates has been postponed to Jan. 22.

NAMES IN THE NEWS: Tonight's report by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson on the administration farm program will be rebroadcast by WISC and WISC-FM at 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Prof. John Dietrich of the University of Wisconsin will speak at Tuesday night's meeting of the Madison Theater Guild in the Community Center. He will discuss differences in staging of legitimate and television plays.

Ricky Walker, 10, Washington, Ill., has won the 35-foot space ship given as first prize in a contest on "Space Patrol." He's planning to use the vehicle as a community clubhouse for youngsters.

Mae Marsh, one of the silent pictures' topmost stars, will play a Hollywood character actress in "A Star Is Born" at the Warner studios. Pat O'Malley, another star of the early days, also will be in the picture.

Red Skelton has signed a three-year contract to make transcribed radio shows. He'll star in a daily half-hour program.

James Daigleish, New York City, and Kenneth Gaburo, Lake Charles, La., are joint winners of the ninth annual George Gershwin memorial contest for the best original, unpublished orchestra composition by a young American. It will be announced today. They will share a $1,000 prize and their works will be performed by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra.

Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone have announced the engagement of their daughter, Joan, to Seth Baker, New York stock broker. The marriage will be in mid-March.

Ray Gibson, Jr., a 27-year-old ex-Navy man who lives in Detroit, Mich., has won a tuition scholarship in the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism offered by CBS in connection with the "Rogers of the Gazette" program. His winning script will be broadcast Jan. 13.

Civil Liberties Union Backs Refusal to Talk

NEW YORK (UP) — The American Civil Liberties Union announced Sunday its support of three cases challenging the right of congressional investigating committees to ask witnesses questions about their political beliefs and associations.

Patrick Murphy Malin, executive director of the ACLU, said the cases involved Julius Emspak, United Electrical Workers union official, and authors Harvey O'Connor and Corliss Lamont.

Lamont and O'Connor were questioned by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy (R-Wis) about alleged Communist sympathies and associations. The ACLU said it opposed such questioning "either because of the limited scope of the committee's function or its impact on freedom of expression."

Emspak's case is scheduled to be argued in the Supreme Court Tuesday. The ACLU said the House Un-American Affairs Committee had no right to ask him questions merely to expose his views.
