Door County Park Chief Found $6,159 'Short'

An audit of accounts of two Door County state parks showed that former park supervisor William H. Beckstrom diverted $6,159 to his own use, State Auditor J. Jay Keliher said Thursday.

Keliher said a report of the audit had been forwarded to Door County Dist. Atty. Herbert W. Johnson for action.

Beckstrom, of Fish Creek, pleaded guilty last August to embezzling $1,180 in funds from Peninsula and Potowatomi State Parks before his suspension. Grover Stapleton, Door County judge, deferred sentence pending completion of the audit.

Keliher said Beckstrom's diversion of the $6,159, including the original $1,180, took place between January, 1947, and August, 1953. It included $2,179 in cash, $3,570 in fraudulent invoices, and $410 in state labor and equipment.

150 Sign Up Here for Postal School

About 150 prospective registrants have signed up for the proposed postal school at Madison Vocational school, Acting Postmaster Elmo C. Cooper said Friday, but no dates can be set nor final plans announced until the new Postal Guide comes.

The Postal Guide, published in Washington, will be the main textbook of the course. The last one was published in July, 1951, and the new one is expected to appear within a month, Cooper said.

Executives in charge of mailing for many lines of business have shown widespread interest in the school, which is expected to extend about eight weeks, with Madison postoffice personnel supplying the instructors, the postmaster declared. Many inquiries and favorable comments have been received, he said.

Statue of Liberty Is in N. Y., Not N. J., Court Rules

NEW YORK (AP) — A State Supreme Court Justice has ruled that the Statue of Liberty is in New York, not New Jersey.

The touchy legal dispute involving "Miss Liberty's" citizenship was touched off by Mrs. Evelyn Hill, who said New York state had no right to collect taxes from her because her souvenir and food shop, located at the famous landmark, was really in New Jersey.

Mrs. Hill petitioned the court for a refund of $2,200 in sales and business taxes collected by the New York City comptroller. She cited historical precedent going back to 1664 to prove her contention that Miss Liberty is a New Jerseyite.

Justice Thomas L. J. Corcoran disagreed. He based his ruling on an agreement between the two states in 1833, giving jurisdiction of Bedloe's Island, on which the statue is located, to New York even though it is on the New Jersey side of the Hudson River.

Mrs. Hill was not supported by New Jersey in her claim. New Jersey authorities said they were satisfied that Miss Liberty really is a New Yorker.

A COMMENDABLE practice of the Wisconsin Union concert committee is that of bringing young, virtually unknown artists to town on its annual concert series. Often, the same musicians return a few years later as headline attractions.

The committee appears to have made another good bet. This season's newcomer was Lillian Kallir, who played the first of two concerts in the Wisconsin Union theater Friday night. She will repeat the program there at 8 tonight.

One's first impression of Miss Kallir was surprise that so youthful-appearing a girl could carry so much authority in her playing. It was an impression which lasted throughout the concert.

Yet, when it was over, the work that stayed most strongly with this listener was the 22-year-old artist's first — Bach's "Italian Concerto," one of those uncommon concerti for piano alone.

Written for the two-keyboard clavicembalo, this work was transferred to the piano with faithfulness to its extent by Miss Kallir, notably in the second movement. Bach used one keyboard of the old instrument to contrast with the other; the pianist's bright, incisive treble gave a perfect contrast to her singing, legato left hand.

Except for her work in Beethoven's first concerto, performed with the University of Wisconsin Symphony orchestra under Prof. Richard C. Church's admirable direction, this quality persisted throughout the program, sometimes satisfyingly, sometimes not.

In the Beethoven, Miss Kallir showed versatility in tonal color as well as explicit execution. Here were singing passages, brilliance and power.

Kauder's "Toccata" fared equally well, with its rapid-fire opening and its sober central portion, moving into a demanding finale.

Brahms' "Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Handel" completed the program. Miss Kallir played with vitality and skill, but the very contrasts between left and right hands which had made the Bach so good worked against the unity of some of the variations.

The audience called her back for two encores, Debussy's "The Girl with the Flaxen Hair" and Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song."

And we won't be surprised when she returns another season.
