Weyland Also Asks Tactical Bombers
 TOKYO, Saturday (AP)—Gen. O. P. Weyland, U.S. Far East Air Force commander, said Friday that American long-range atomic bombers are a major deterrent to World War III.
 But he emphasized that short-range U.S. Air Forces must be kept strong along the borders of the Communist and free worlds.
 Weyland, who leaves next month to become chief of the U.S. Tactical Air Command, did not rule out the possibility that some Air Force units might be withdrawn from Korea if the truce continues.
 In an exclusive interview, he said the role of strategic, or long-range bomber units, must be kept up-to-date and ready, too, he said.
 "The role of the strategic bomber and its weapons has been substantially unchanged for the past nine years," Weyland said. "It remains our primary offensive means and major deterrent to World War III."
 "As tactical aviation and the land and sea arms become atomically capable, it is natural that certain readjustments will be made in the force structure of the three services to exploit these destructive weapons efficiently," he said.
