Radio listeners now share in the music which Mrs. H. C. Hoesly and her daughter, Luan, have been producing for the last five years in their home at 9 S. Spooner st.

In this composite photo, Mrs. Hoesly is shown at the piano and Miss Hoesly at the electric organ, on which they play duets for the WIBA audience.

They transcribe the programs in the living room of the Hoesly home, then the recordings are broadcast by WIBA and WIBA-FM at 6:15

By RUTH PILGER ANDREWS
Organists have a fine opportunity to help church goers and music lovers observe the Lenten season. Organ composers of all periods have been inspired by the drama, beauty, and pathos of the last days of Jesus of Nazereth.

The privilege of hearing this music need not be restricted to Sundays but may be satisfied every day by hearing excellent recordings. Laymen will find a new understanding of these serious days, and organists can hear new interpretations of music familiar to them.

The inspiration for Marcel Duyce's "Passion Symphony" and "Passion Symphony" and the contained by Goorg Boehm, was born 23 years and the chorale preludes, "Have when the composition."

The inspiration for Marcel Dupre's "Passion Symphony" came when the composer was playing a recital at Wanamaker's
in Philadelphia. From the themes suggested by the audience, Durpe chose a plain song
themes, "Adeste Fideles,"
"Adore Te," and "Christe Redemptor Omnium," and used
them to improvise his symphony.
The "Passion Symphony" took final form two years later and was played by the composer at the opening of the organ at the Cathedral of Westminster in London on Oct. 9, 1924. The symphony's four movements are
"The World Awaits the Savior,"
"Nativity," "Crucifixion," and
"Resurrection."
