CORTY-FOUR paintings representing recent work by artists in seven Midwestern states will make up the third spring show of the University of Wisconsin department of art education, opening today. States from which work came are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa,

Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, and Nebraska. "The exhibition committee eliminated the work of Wisconsin painters on the grounds that it is already known locally and also the exhibition inasmuch as 22 of the 44 paintings are from that state.

"The following works appear to make the Illinois contingent strong in quality as well as quantity: "Yellow Shore' by Edward Betts, a painting where planes of color make this semi-abstraction an extremely handsome design; Eleanor Coen's 'Lagoon' in which primitivistic use of color and line combine to make a sensitive painting; 'Zapoteca' by Claude Bentley is painted in the contemporary idiom of non-objectivity and is a particularly lucid design, and Joyce Treiman's 'Angel for Abraham' is a dynamic combination of vigorous color and draughtsmanship.

"Donald Mattison is one of the painters from Indiana and his oil entitled 'Solstice' is a configuration of sea-side symbols and connotations calculated to arouse nostalgia. Iowa's James Lechay makes no such romantic speed of notificity by Aaron Boh-surf painting in his casein painting entitled 'Misty Morn.'
