It's very natural to rejoice when your luck is good and to feel a little sad when your luck is bad; Only rarely do you get the chance to rise above bad luck, as my friend, Henry Chanin, did in the bridge hand shown today.

Chanin knew that he was bidding the South hand to the hilt. His partner's first response showed a count of 16 or 17 points, which meant that the combined count was only 31 to 32 points in high cards. Nevertheless Henry pushed ahead to the slam in spades. This was slightly optimistic, but far from slightly optimistic, but far from unreasonable.

West opened the jack of clubs, and Chanin considered his best line of play. Let's consider the hand along with him. Since we can see along with him. Since we can see all the cards we can tell that both finesses in diamonds and the finesse in clubs are doomed to failure.

At this point East's last two cards were diamonds, and he had to lead up to dummy's ace-queen, giving dummy a free finess. Chanin thus lost only one trick, making his slam contract. to lead up to dummy's ace-queen,
