

Advice on Your HEALTH

By HERMAN N. BUENDES, M.D. Probably no disease holds more dread, or causes more worry for you parents, than poliomyelitis, or infantile paralysis.

While polio, of course, is a terrible disease and has caused tragedy in many an American home, it is not the wholesale killer or paralyzing terror that most of you have come to believe.

I know you've probably been reading a lot of newspaper stories about polio and the current March of Dimes campaign. But I think a few more articles are in order to help you better understand just what polio is, what it does and does not do, and what you and science can do about it.

Incidentally, I want to urge you to support the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis' March of Dimes program before it ends next week. Polio is on the increase in the United States, and this organization is spearheading efforts to find an effective preventive.

Statistics Tell Story Just how great a menace is polio? Well, let's look at some of the statistics.

The number of cases, of course, varies from year to year. In 1938, there were only 1,705 cases in the entire country. In 1952, the total was 57,628. More than 1,000 of these were in Chicago alone, and I had to declare that it had reached epidemic proportion there. There were about 40,000 cases in 1954.

Yet even in the worst years, the proportion of those stricken with diagnosed polio is relatively small. Actually, the chances of your child contracting a diagnosed case of polio during the first 20 years of his life is as low as 1 in 100.

Adults Have Good Odds You adults have even better odds. I'll explain why in another column.

Even if you or your youngster are stricken, you still have the odds in your favor. The National Foundation reports that 50 per cent of the recognized cases of polio recover completely. About 30 per cent show slight after-effects, and about 14 per cent are left crippled.

Some six per cent may die. The death rate has been cut in half since the 1938-41 period.

Of the 14 per cent left severely handicapped, many are greatly aided through rehabilitation and special equipment. The 30 per cent suffering only a mild degree of paralysis usually are able to continue living an ordinary life with few, if any, restrictions.

Each year, on the average, the number of cases of measles, scarlet fever and tuberculosis is far greater than the reported cases of polio.

Still, for every recognized case of polio it's estimated there are at least 100 cases of unrecognized polio.

QUESTION AND ANSWER E. M. J.: Is dilantin helpful? Will it increase the blood pressure?

Answer: Dilantin, properly employed under the physician's direction, is helpful. It is employed to control convulsions.
