

BROWNELL URGES SIMPLIFIED LAW ON PERJURY TRIALS

WASHINGTON, March 6 (AP)— Apparently with Harvey Matusow and some other turnabout witnesses in mind, Attorney General Brownell asked Congress again today to simplify the law dealing with perjury prosecutions.

Brownell said the change he proposed in no way would reduce the protection afforded defendants under present law, nor would it shift the burden of proof from the prosecution.

"Ridiculous" Rule Hit
It merely eliminates what appears to be a ridiculous requirement that proof be adduced as to which of two statements is false when one of such statements must, of necessity, be so," he said.

Under Brownell's proposed amendment, a conviction could be sought by showing that a witness willfully contradicted himself on "material matters" while testifying under oath within a three-year period before U. S. courts, grand juries, or congressional committees.

As the law now stands, a prosecutor must prove on which occasion the witness was lying. And this must be done through two independent witnesses or at least one witness plus documentary evidence.

Brownell renewed his proposal after several government witnesses in recent weeks, including Matusow, aware they had lied under oath at previous trials and investigations.

While he mentioned no names, the attorney general obviously had these cases in mind when he appealed for early action in letters to Vice President Nixon and House Speaker Rayburn.

Brownell noted he made the same proposal to the last Congress and added: "Unfortunately, such legislation was not enacted despite the fact that it is greatly needed."

Criminal penalty laws are never retroactive, so any new measures would not affect testimony already given by Matusow and two recenting witnesses before the Federal Communications commission.

A federal grand jury in New York is currently investigating the turnabout Matusow, self-styled former communist who now says he concocted testimony as a government witness in trials and hearings involving alleged subversives. Matusow faces a similar examination in Texas, and the Senate Internal Security subcommittee also has been delving into his jumbled stories.
