5,000 FRENCH BEES LAND IN N. Y. FOR TIME TEST

NEW YORK, June 14—(AP) Five thousand French bees arrived today to see if they can tell the time of day.

They buzzed off into a station at the Museum of Natural History after a transatlantic air flight. It will be some time before any results of the international experiment will be announced.

The bees have been conditioned to emerge from their Paris hives at a certain time each day to get a meal of sugar water.

A duplicate of their surroundings has been set up in the museum. The idea is to see if they'll leave their hives here on the same schedule they did in Paris, where the time is five hours ahead of New York.
