

Fix It Yourself By HUBBARD COBB (The Handy Man)

Many electric appliances don't operate properly because the prongs on the cord have become dry and don't make good contact.

Before you glue a wood dowel in place, cut a small groove the length of the dowel. This will allow any excess glue to flow out and insure a better fit and a tighter joint.

If you find drafts of cold air coming around windows through the opening where the wash weight pulley is fitted, fill this opening with loose insulation.

Squeaks in stairs can often be fixed by running a long thin wood screw through the front edge of the tread into which the riser fits and if this screw is long enough and properly located, it will pass through the top edge of the riser securing it to the tread.

When cutting laminated plastic with a hand saw, the finish surface of the board should face upward. When using a power saw, the finish surface should be down. This prevents chipping the finish surface.
