

Today's Radio Highlights

When Daniel Boone was 83 he became bored with retirement and annoyed that he was growing too fat for the walnut coffin which he kept under his bed. His ensuing expedition and his discriminating taste in pine boxes is dramatized in "The Four Coffins of Dan'l Boone"—WRC, 7:30 p. m.

Raymond Gram Swing takes time out from his interpretations of the latest war dispatches to do battle on "Information Please"—WMAL, 7:30 p. m.

The American bricklayer, Pietro Di Donato, whose first novel, "Christ in Concrete," has become a best-seller is still laying bricks, but he devotes this Tuesday evening to "We, the People"—WJSV, 8 p. m.

You, too, can understand the Einstein theory of relativity. In six minutes the University of Chicago's "The Human Adventure" summarizes the gravitational research which lead to Prof. Einstein's description—WJSV, 8 p. m.

Wistful Vista comes again to the airplanes as Fibber McGee and Molly reopen their series—WRC, 8:30 p. m.