

Frederic March Scheduled As Guest On Cantor's Hour

Veteran Of Stage And Screen To Compare Notes
With Comedian; Thriller Set For "Mr.
District Attorney"

Frederic March, recently seen on Broadway in "Hope For Harvest", and a veteran of 40 motion pictures, will match backstage notes with Eddie Cantor on the latter's "Time To Smile" program over WEAJ Wednesday, at 9 p. m. The handsome veteran of more than two score screen productions and many stage successes will be greeted by Dinah Shore, Harry von Zell and Bert "The Mad Russian" Gordon.

Kay Kyser will conduct a class in pipe organology when his "College of Musical Knowledge" convenes Wednesday at 10 p. m. over WEAJ.

During recesses between quiz sessions, Kyser and his orchestra, with Harry Babbit and Dorothy Dunn as soloists, will feature such danceable tunes as "How About You," "Anything Goes," "Carloca" and "Three Little Words."

"The Case of the Talking Corpse," which will occupy "Mr. District Attorney" Wednesday is not quite the cadaverous sound effect one might think at 9:30 p. m. over WEAJ. However, the remains of a wealthy old lady might just as well have talked so with her murder were concerned. You'll have to listen, yourself, to find out what led "Mr. D. A." to place the guilt where it belonged.

Finding substitutes for the substitute will occupy the attention of the Duke of Paducah on the Plantation Party broadcast Wednesday over WEAJ at 9:30 p. m. The Duke, who contends that now-a-days everything in the modern home is operated by switches except the children, will discuss the problems of building and furnishing a modern home.

Music from Gounod's lyric opera, "Faust," will feature the second program of "Great Moments in Music," with Jean Tenneyson, Norman Cordon, Suzanne Sten, and William Hahn singing its favorite airs on WABC Wednesday at 10:15 p. m.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 14

Eastern Standard Time—Subtract One

BABY MAY HAVE TO DO WITHOUT RUBBER PANTIES

CHICAGO, Jan. 14—(INS)—Chicago merchants reported today that because of the government conservation program the infant population which goes for the rubber trouser as an item of apparel will be confronted with the necessity of a change of costume before long.

Since this garment is off the priority list, the merchants predicted, it soon will be hard to get. They also feared that rubber gloves for housewives and the rubber bathing cap soon would disappear.

EARLY ELECTRIC WORKER DIES IN SPRINGFIELD

SPRINGFIELD, O., Jan. 14—(INS) — One of the men who supervised the installation of the state's first overhead trolley systems on the streets of Columbus in 1887, as well as the first electric lights in Ohio's capital, was dead today at 74.

He was Samuel F. Hunter, former Springfield fire chief who succumbed following a brief illness. Hunter, who retired in 1928, was made chief just four days after his appointment to the department in March, 1904.

As foreman of the old Columbus Light and Power Co., he supervised the installation of electric lights in the old Neil house. Later he served as foreman of the Columbus police and fire telegraph system. In 1904 he organized the Ohio Fire Chiefs Assn.