

Series Shows How Allies Are Beating Axis on Seas

Battle Stations, a series of dramatizations showing how America's armed forces slowly but surely are defeating the Axis on the seas, will be presented in four weekly broadcast over WIBA starting at 7:30 tonight.

The first two programs will tell of the Battle of the Atlantic. They will describe how the army air forces and the civilian air patrol, with but a flimsy handful of weapons, swept the German submarine from American waters.

The first program also will show how our sea and air power grew from a mere threat to a battering ram of destruction. Famous "firsts" such as the launching of a seaplane from a warship, global flights, dive bombings, skip bombing technique, lighter than air pioneering and polar flights, will be dramatically portrayed.
