

Allotment Swindlers Upset By D. A. In Wednesday Yarn

Keeping up with crime problems in the news, "Mr. District Attorney" attacks the racket in which soldiers are married solely for the government allotment to wives. "The Case of the Allotment Swindle" will be heard Wednesday (WEAF, 8:30 p. m., EST).

Eddie Cantor will complicate his life with another "Ida" when he presents screen-player Ida Lupino on his "Time To Smile" air show on Wednesday over WEAF at 8 p. m., EST. Meanwhile, Ida Cantor will cross up the egg-eyed comedian by presenting him with a brother-in-law as played by Charlie Cantor (the "Finnegan" of "Duffy's") and in real life no relation to Eddie Cantor.

Tunes of the Gay Nineties, presented in distinctive Merton Gould style, will be the highlight of the Merton Gould-Alec Templeton "Carnival," on Wednesday, at 9:30 p. m., over WABC. "Little Annie Rooney," "The Band Played On," "You Tell Me Your Dream" and "Lily of the Valley" comprise the medley. Alec Templeton offers as his pianistic features Jerome Kern's "The Way You Look Tonight," Hapfeld's "As Time Goes By," and his improvisations on themes suggested by the studio audience. Other orchestral selections include "Liza,"

"People Will Say We're In Love" and "Night and Day."

The servant problem arrives in the lap of Lionel Barrymore, "Mayor of the Town," when Marilly, his housekeeper, makes a play for attention in "Apron Rebellion," on Wednesday, at 8 p. m., over WABC. Marilly, played by Agnes Moorehead, does her attention-seeking by climbing into bed and announcing that she is sick. Barrymore's "cure" is drastic enough to clear up the situation in a hurry, but not before there have been several hearty laughs.

Luke McCoy had a good heart and a long memory and that explains how he won his greatest case in James Aswell's story, "A Promise to Mark," which will be dramatized on "Authors Playhouse" Wednesday over WEAF at 11:30 p. m., EST.
