Japs Hail Rail Seizure

Their Biggest '43 Win, Say Minnesota's Judd

MINNEAPOLIS — (U.P.) — Rep. Walter H. Judd, (R-Minn.), a veteran of 10 years of medical service in China, believes the Japanese consider the conditions that forced government seizure of the railroads their "biggest victory" of the year.

Judd, in an address here, predicted victory over Germany in 1944, but said the war with Japan would last longer.

"I'm sure the Japanese are more confident now than ever before that we are going to lose, even if they can't win," Judd said, "because they regard the conditions that forced the government to take over the railroads and other similar conditions as the biggest victory they have had in a year."

Scores Doolittle

Judd said he did not believe the blame lay entirely with labor.

"But wherever the blame lies," he continued, "the situation was certainly interpreted in Japan as rebellion just as we would interpret similar actions there."

Judd criticized the raid on Tokyo by Jimmy Doolittle.

"That raid was far more costly than it was worth," he said. "It cost us not only every plane and many of the men but also those air fields in China. The Chinese had grubbed those fields out with their hands and then that fool Doolittle raid tipped the Japanese off and they moved in on them. We were pretty cocky about that raid."

Praises Stalin

Judd believes that Russia is our greatest ally in the east despite the fact she had not declared war on Japan.

"By the very fact she is at Japan's back door, Russia is tying up half a million of Japan's best troops," Judd asserted. "It would have been a catastrophe had Stalin granted us bombing bases in Siberia. In the first place Japan could have cut all communication lines to such bases in 24 hours and the bases would have been extremely difficult to defend. Thank God Joe Stalin kept his shirt on."
