

Corwin's Christmas Play To Be Aired Tuesday Night

Foul funds meet in Hades to attempt to do away with mortal man's benevolence, in Norman Corwin's "The Plot to Overthrow Christmas," which will be presented by a cast headed by Orson Welles as Nero and Ray Collins as Santa Claus, on "This Is My Best," at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday over station WABC. The devil and Simon Legree, among others, join Nero in the plot, in this unusual story, written first and produced by Corwin in 1939. It has been repeated annually since then.

"The Man in the Velvet Hat," the tale of a newspaper columnist whose reports of multiple murders panic the populace of New York, is the "Mystery Theatre" dramatization at 8 p. m. Tuesday over WFAF.

"What's he got that I couldn't have if my tonsils weren't out?" demands Milton Berle when informed that Crooner Andy Russell will return to "Let Yourself Go," at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday over station WJZ. Andy currently running out in front of the swoonstakes, will attempt to give Fm Cee Berle a few simple lessons in the art of singing. He'll also reveal his secret ambition. Maestro Ray Bloch will be on hand to baton the orchestral selections.
