

Clever Detective Mystery Features 'Inner Sanctum'

Appearing as guest ghoul behind Paul McGrath's creaking door, radio headliner Larry Haines finds sleeping tablets a poor alibi for murder in "Now I Lay Me Down—To Murder," a crime-laden "Inner Sanctum" mystery to be broadcast at 9 p. m. Tuesday over CBS.

His wife is murdered in her sleep—his lawyer insists that the puzzled husband destroy some tell-tale evidence—a brother-in-law's mangled body is discovered in the basement. It takes a clever detective to piece together the jigsaw details of a gruesome dual murder but when the pieces are assembled they form a perfect eternal triangle.

Walter Brennan, one of film-dom's outstanding character actors plays the leading role with June Lockhart featured as his granddaughter when "This Is My Root" presents the "Blueprint for Happiness" at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday over CBS.

Brennan will be heard as an old man whose son and daughter-in-law with whom he lives, make life miserable for him. He adds to the family aggravation by opposing the marriage they are trying to force on their daughter. Attempts to get rid of the old man fail, when he works out his "Blueprint" and restores harmony to the family.

Sydney is the largest city in Australia, with 1,310,530 population.
