

Sleuthing Night Solves 'Impossible'

Carl Brisson, amateur sleuth and night summer vacation interrupted by what appears in "The Case of the Impossible Murder," last detective series, "A Voice in the Night," at Brisson, who uncovers a motive for murder by black magic, and finally traps a clever plotter by methods to dispose of his wealthy wife.

With the shortage of domestic help today, Tommy Riggs and his pert little girl friend, Betty Lou, encounter difficulty in their search for a new housekeeper to replace Mrs. McIntyre, who has gone on vacation, during their broadcast at 7:30 p. m. over CBS.

Helping will be Betty Lou's dopey boy friend, Wilbur, as well as Mrs. Wingate, the snooty neighbor.

Also scheduled for Friday evening is another chapter in the life of Henry Aldrich. At 8 p. m. over CBS, Henry and his buddy, Homer, both bored with their summer vacation, contrive to make things livelier for all concerned.

They manage to create enough complications to keep their parents scurrying about town in search of sporting equipment. The old swimmin' hole, however, provides a final—tho uncomfortable—refuge for the two lads.
