

John Garfield Plays Pugilist In Odets' Drama 'Golden Boy'

Screen Star John Garfield, who rose from the slums of New York to become one of filmland's great actors, will make his second stellar appearance on the "Hollywood Players" series at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday over CBS when he plays the leading role in Clifford Odets' successful stage and screen play, "Golden Boy." The story deals with a young prize fighter hoping to continue his pugilistic career despite the objections of his family who had always wanted him to become a violinist.

Mike Shayne, wide-awake Irish detective, turns his talents towards solving a murder which was dreamed about and then actually happens during the "Michael Shayne" mystery show at 8 p. m. over MBS. A businessman, terrorized by a vivid nightmare in which he kills his best friend, consults psychiatrists to help him with his problem. When they do him no good, he turns to Shayne. The dreamed-up murder, meanwhile, actually takes place and Shayne follows thru to save an innocent man and pin the guilt on the real killer.

The second of the series of broadcasts aimed at clarifying the issues in this year's political campaigns will be presented on Mutual's "American Forum of the Air" under the title "Is a National Political Change Necessary," to be heard at 9:30 p. m.

Debating the issue will be Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, and Rep. John J. Sparkman of Alabama, chairman of the speaker's bureau of the Democratic national committee.

In conjunction with "National Employ the Physically-Handicapped Week," Parks Johnson and
