

Susan Hayward Demonstrates Way To Outwit Blackmailers

Susan Hayward, lovely film star, demonstrates a novel way of defeating blackmailers when she is heard in "Dame Fortune" on "Suspense," Thursday at 8 p. m. over CBS. Miss Haywood will enact the role of a retired actress, blackmailed because of letters embarrassing to her.

Her first solution, telling her husband about the letters and thus removing the substance from the blackmailers' threats, backfires when her husband's life is threatened. It is then that the actress resorts to a more drastic method for outwitting the blackmailers.

Singer Dick Haymes, who learned French as a schoolboy, and radio actress Lurene Tuttle, who learned French a couple of days ago, will tangle accents in the dramatic spot on Haymes' CBS show at 9 p. m. Writer Harry Kronman's delightful nonsense provides the showcase for Haymes' "Darling, Je Vous Aime Beaucoup."

The trials and tribulations of a typical American housewife—Mrs. Cugat, of the famous magazine Cugat's, will be dramatized on Reader's Digest — Radio Edition, with Constance Bennett portraying the harassed Mrs. C, at 10 p. m. over CBS.

Things really begin to hum when Abbott, hoping to borrow $10 from a fight promoter, agrees to sign Costello to fight a thug named McGurk, on the Abbott and Costello show at 10 p. m. over NBC. By means of a psychological
