The eastbound plane is to leave Madison at 3:10 p. m., arrive in Detroit in 1 hour 35 minutes, Cleveland in 2 hours 55 minutes, Pittsburgh in 3 hours 55 minutes and Washington in 5 hours 10 minutes. The return flight will leave Washington at 11:55 a. m. and arrive in Madison at 4:15 p. m.

Four of the eight Northwest flights stopping in Madison will use the new Martin 202, 36-passenger twin-engine planes that are about 100 miles an hour faster than the present DC-3 type, Henderson said. All eight flights will be in Martin planes by July 1 or shortly thereafter, according to NWA. One of the features of the plane is a compartment in the cabin for passengers who do not wish to check their luggage, Henderson added.
