Hollywood

By Edith Gwynn

Screen Plays, Inc., which made the Henry Morgan picture, "So This Is New York," is trying to get Jack Dempsey to play the referee in "The Champion," by Ring Lardner. Kirk Douglas plays the title role, and pretty Lola Albright, who's been testing for weeks at many studios, not only has landed the femme lead, but a long contract with this outfit. Another real cutie-pie we're happy to note just got a boost toward stardom is little Julie London, who last week became Gary Cooper's leading lady in "Task Force."

David Street, of screen and radio, is opening an auto-salesroom for Renault as a sideline here.

The Jubilee party at Pickfair sponsored by the Jewish Home for the Aged was a big success—with Dorothy Kirsten, Mario Lanza, Kay Kyser, and Rudy Vallee among those who lent their talents.

The spats that Lana Turner and Bob Topping had with the British press and with each other are as nothing compared to their domestic battles which followed in France and now in N. Y. Returning chums keep reporting on their private and public pugnacity. Their most used term of endearment to each other is "Get Lost!"

Maybe you haven't heard much of Bob Burns lately—but you don't have to lie awake worrying about his finances. He's just signed to do a series of seven-minute monologs over Columbia Broadcasting which will net him $5,000 per talk.
