By Edith Gwynn

Errol Flynn, borrowed by Metro to play opposite Greer Garson in "Forsyte Saga," is playing a role away from his home studio, Warners, for the first time in his career. Greer, who has been at M. G. M. for years and years, has never worked anywhere but there.

People will be surprised if Robert Flaherty, who is 65 years young, doesn't get a special Academy Award this year in the documentary division. He practically INVENTED 'em. His "Nanook of the North" dates back to 1922, and his current, "The Louisiana Story," has won critical raves everywhere.

After a long time away, Frank Mitchell is back on the screen with a featured role in "Neptune's Daughter," the Red Skelton-Esther Williams expected whopper.
