SINKING PROBLEM SOLVED

VENTURA, Calif.—(U.P.)—The city water department thinks it finally has beaten the problem of Ventura's "sinking lot." For 40 years, a piece of land 100 by 200 feet has been sinking and sliding. Authorities think maybe a deep quicksand pit is responsible for cracking water mains and sagging sidewalks and porches. Water crews, tired of replacing broken mains, have installed flexible lines.
