TONIGHT

6:00-KFI—Since Al Jolson has announced that he will retire from the air after this season, his guest, Victor Moore, will suggest a list of hobbies that might be suitable for Al to take up his spare time. But after he listens to the rigors of play he may decide that it would be simpler to keep on working.

7:00-KNX—William Frawley relates for "Hallmark Playhouse" what happened when a midget named Pearl du Monville, who has been insulted by the manager, bats for Squawk Magrew's ball team, in the James Thurber tale, "You Could Look It Up."

8:30-KHJ—A 20th Century businessman finds himself catapulted into the year 2114, where an Amazonic society dominated by women is in full sway. . . . That is the story when the "Mysterious Traveler" introduces us to "Escape Into the Future."

9:00-KFI—Because of his background, George Burns fancies himself a natural for video vaudeo . . . but Gracie, the realist, realizes that the crushing blow to his career would occur if he were to be seen, so she arranges for Marie McDonald to join his act. . . . Three guesses where the eyes will be.
