This cast has more "guesses" than a racing form.

Bill Holden has been growing cymbidiums (orchids, to you) ever since he discovered several of the precious bulbs at the valley home he bought from Leon Errol two years ago. Leon paid many hundreds for the plants. Holden has a hot-house now, with heating, watering, lighting, and other gadgets. Some cymbidium bulbs are valued as high as $2,000 when properly cultivated, but Bill won't know how "rich" his is in this department for a time yet, because it takes some of them two years, and more to bloom. He got his identification tags beautifully mixed up!

HOLDEN

When Walter Chrysler was here he told some local chums that the H. Trumans have forced him out of the squab business. (Oh, yeh! He likes a lot of things that move besides cars!). Chrysler said that during the Roosevelt regime he raised 10,000 birds a year at his Virginia farm

— a great part of which went for White House consumption, wot with banquets and all that. But he's had nary an order since the Trumans moved in because Boss doesn't like squab . . . While on the subject of raising something besides a temperature: Victor McLaglen is an authority on Jersey cattle. His 500 head herd of prize Jerseys is one of California's finest and Vic has signed a contract with Borden's for every quart of milk produced.

Wedding plans of Carole Matthews and songsmith Sam Coslow have hit a snag.

Just before Darryl Zanuck sailed for Europe he bought Jean Beckett's magazine yarn, "The Irresistible Liar," at a fancy price.

The Doll's House in Balboa features a drink called, "Cucumber" (Southern Comfort, Creme de Menthe, and Creme de Cacao—if you're still here!) but they ought to call it a "Pickle." Whoever heard of getting "cumbered?"

One of the dullest parties ever given hereabouts was that soiree of Lpm Ayres and Saint Suber's — after the premiere of "Kiss Me Kate." Hundreds
