er talked strike. They came into the negotiations room deadpan.

Suddenly at 9:30 last Friday night they simply announced that all Goodrich plants in seven states would be struck at midnight. It struck so suddenly that few, even among the union members in the rubber center of Akron, knew they would be picketing in the morning.

Why this mystery? Why no notice to the national CIO office—which might have called it off? Why no phone call to Phil Murray?

Why not at least one extension of the contract as Walter Reuther and all CIO had done to their contracts?

Well, many of us cynics know that George Bass wants to be president of the Rubber Workers and has wanted it for a long and strike-filled time.

And many of us veteran convention-coverers know the vote-getting potential of a man who can get up on the platform as the leader who started off the first fourth-round strike. With a couple of well-placed clagues you could really stir up hysteria just as you're nominated for president of the union.

So some of us feel we know why there'll be fewer auto tires and other rubber gadgets produced these next weeks.

And only those who don't know inner union power politics will find a falsie in this reasoning.
