Democrats Seek to Save Program

Letters Shoot Out to Rally Anti-Inflation

WASHINGTON — (UP) — The Democratic national committee put pressure on Democrats in congress and throughout the nation Friday to come to the rescue of Pres. Truman's crippled anti-inflation program.

Chairman William M. Boyle, Jr., sent a letter to every Democratic senator and congressman reminding them of strong anti-inflation resolutions passed by the national committee and Democratic rallies in the West and Midwest this year.

Atomic Price Bomb

Boyle said those who fail to support the president's program "are sitting on an atomic price bomb with a time fuse set to go off on June '53" when the present control law expires.

At the same time, he called on 50,000 party leaders throughout the country to stir up public sentiment for a "strong anti-inflation" program lest "public apathy" provide a victory for the "special interests."

A Democratic spokesman described the letter to Democratic congressmen as "strong," but said he could not release the text until it is received by the lawmakers.

Deny Strong Power

Boyle did not refer specifically to the new control bills approved by the house and senate banking committees. Both measures deny Mr. Truman most of the stronger control power he sought, and reduce present authority for price rollbacks and rigid rent ceilings.

The senate formally took up its control bill Friday, but actual debate will not start until Monday. Supporters of the president's program promised a hard fight to restore some of the powers stripped away by the banking committee. Privately, however, they had little hope of succeeding.

May Compromise

The house is due to take up its control bill Wednesday. There was growing belief that both houses may not finish their separate bills and may compromise the sharp differences between the two measures by June 30 when controls expire.

That would necessitate a temporary extension of the present law, unless congress was willing to
