Trucking Firm Settles State Suit for $15,528

A $15,528 settlement of a $20,000 Wisconsin Motor Vehicle Department suit against the Central Wisconsin Transportation Co., Wisconsin Rapids trucking firm, for truck license payments, was approved Thursday by Circuit Judge Herman W. Sachtjen.

The two-year-old court dispute involved Motor Vehicle Commissioner Ben L. Marcus' claim that the Central Wisconsin firm had continued to do business in Wisconsin while evading state tax payments here by transferring its holdings to an Illinois corporation.

With the tax case settled by stipulation, the trucking firm officials said they planned to dissolve their Wisconsin corporation and incorporate with an Illinois corporation.
