Second Castle Smaller

Gen. Robertson's second residence, his official home in western Germany today, is Roettgen castle. near the east bank of the Rhine opposite Cologne. It is owned by the maker of Germany's famous 4711 Eau de Cologne, and formerly was used by Maj. Gen. W. A. Bishop, British high commissioner

Roettgen castle is too small for the British high commissoner for all Germany. It has the advantage of being only a few miles from Gen. Robertson's new main headquarters at Wahn and within half an hour's drive of the new German capital of Bonn. But it must be enlarged, altho within the same radius there are a score of bigger

Hundreds of thousands of marks are being spent to enlarge the castle. Extensive alterations are being made to stables and outhouses to accommodate his staff.
