West opened the diamond king.

Declarer won, and led a trump to the ace, then tried the club finesse. East covered the queen, the ace won, and a club was returned to the jack.

Now, in the hope that clubs would break, declarer ruffed a low club. A second trump was led to the king and, when this suit also falled to break, declarer led a fourth club and, instead of ruffing, discarded a losing spade. Meanwhile East completed his echo in spades by playing the deuce on the fourth club. West, in Declarer's technique had not been very good. He should have held up the diamond ace on the first round to insure that he would at least be able to ruff a diamond if his main plan, setting up the club suit, went wrong. As the hand actually was played, however, West missed a spiendid opportunity to defeat the con-trust funds, annuities, gilt-edged man. investments, etc., that will prevent them from following in those footsteps over the hill. But I wonder if these arrangements will change things-will banish the ultimate poverty that settles over pugs. I wonder what the stories will say 20 or 30 or 40 years from now about Joe Louis, Max Schmeling, Jim Braddock, Maxie Baer — or even the great Jack Dempsey and the fabulously wealthy Genc Tunney. I wonder if the hoodoo of

Thesus will carry on with these men and their contemporaries.
