

"Hollywood Is Crazy," Say Blackfeet Braves

Redskins In New Picture Are Genuine

Cast Of Shirley Temple Vehicle Bewildered By "Conveniences"

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 25—(UP)—Twelve Indian Braves, with paint on their faces, beaded back-skin robes of the 17th and 18th centuries in their hands, went shopping today in a Westwood village ten-cent store for eye glasses, pink panties, and diamond rings.

All they could say was "Ugh." This complicated the proceedings. It also left the housewives of Westwood, perhaps the most fashionable suburb of Los Angeles, with their curiosity unsatisfied. They'd speak to the Indians, and smile sweetly, but the braves brushed them away—concentrated upon the gaudy wares before them.

The Indians went shopping only after threatening a revolt against 20th Century-Fox, and that in response to another story concerning the wares of movie making.

The studio needed Indians to appear in the picture entitled "Susannah of the Mounties," starring Shirley Temple. The casting department ordered Indians. Indians arrived by the score, but they were all small Indians with drug store cowboy haircuts and high school educations. C. B. Jamison, the technical director, was aghast. He said he had to have real braves, tall, husky and long-haired. He said any Indians appearing in his picture had to have "photogenic" faces. He said the script called for Blackfeet Indians and Blackfeet Indians he'd have.

He went to the Blackfoot Indian reservation at Browning, Mont., in search of Indians. So did Duke Goux, the business manager, and John Campbell, the press agent. They selected the Messrs. Mad Plume, Many Gums, Old Person, Bull Plume, Yellow Kidney, Night Shoots, Iron Breast, Spotted Eagle, Turle, Chief Coward, Little Blaze and Big Beaver. The latter was the only English speaker in the lot.

The studio signed a contract with the Federal Indian Bureau, calling for wages of $55 a week per man, plus all expenses, but with only $5 to be paid in Hollywood, and the rest to be delivered in Montana, after their big adventure is over.

They've been here a week now, in a silver-painted bungalow on the lot, where all the gas heaters had to be replaced with electric. The braves never had seen gas heaters before. They experimented with them—and nearly committed mass suicide before a hurried janitor learned what was going on.

Little Blaze had the toughest time. He hurt his foot in revolving door he didn't understand, got brushed by an automobile, singed by one of the electrical heaters, and scared by an automatic cigar lighter.

After a couple of days of that he was ready to go home. Big Beaver, the interpreter, explained the trouble.

"He no like Hollywood, all day long thing jump out at him." Night Shoots skinned his foot doing a ceremonial dance before the cameras, but there have been no other casualties. The Blackfeet have been entertained with movies nightly and they have seen the Pacific ocean. They even got samples of it. They took bottles along for that purpose.

But they did not hate, until today, a chance to go shopping in a 10-cent store, a privilege which they demanded on penalty of no more movie acting from them. The studio handed each his $5 bill, piled them all into a basket and took them to the Westwood dime store. Prices went all the way to one dollar. That was a jolt to the Blackfeet.

Spotted Eagle bought socks for his children and a kitchen apron for his squaw. Night Shoots purchased a pair of eye glasses and a paper suit case. The linguistic counter did some business, too, but the big rush was in the costume jewelry department. Diamond rings and pearl brooches sold out completely. They left the Blackfeet, with all their money spent, went back to their silver-colored bungalow.

Big Beaver said he and his friends liked the 10-cent store all right, but that they didn't think so much of the studio.

"All the time people rush," he said. "No time they rest, folks."

Akim Tamiroff To Pay Visit To Charley McCarthy Sunday

Paderewski Has Famous Piano Stool For Concert Tour In This Country; Benny To Give Parody On "Jesse James"

Akim Tamiroff, one of the screen's better character actors, will do his best to scare the daylight out of Charlie McCarthy when he visits the program Sunday. Tamiroff is Charlie's own guest of honor. There will be another guest who will be heard with Don Ameche in the dramatic feature of the hour. Dorothy Lamour, Donald Dickson and Robert Armstrong's orchestra are the regular members of the cast of the broadcast over WEA at 8 p. m. who join Ameche, Edgar Bergen, McCarthy and Tamiroff.

Akim Tamiroff played the general in "The General Died at Dawn" and the most villainous of the pirates in "The Buccaneer." Now he tackles the terror of the age, Charlie McCarthy.

When Ignace Jan Paderewski inaugurates his 20th concert tour of the United States, during the Magic Key of RCA program Sunday, he will not be without the famous piano stool which has accompanied him on world-wide tours for more than 30 years.

Paderewski, who will give an hour's recital over WJZ beginning at 2 p. m., launching a nationwide concert tour, will not dream of playing a concert without his specially constructed chair, now about the Ile de France en route to this country.

A curious, somewhat cumbersome-looking, high-backed affair, the chair, or piano stool, weighs about 50 pounds. Long, heavy red fringe obscures the upper parts of his legs. The legs and back of the chair are detachable, to permit of its being packed into its special case, which, covered with labels, is tangible proof of its world-wide peregrinations.

Viola Philo, soprano, will be soloist with the Radio City Music Hall Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Eino Raape, during the concert Sunday at 12 noon over WJZ.

Miss Philo will sing the "Air de Lia" from Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue," "The Little Damozel" by Novalis, and "Phyllis Has Such Charming Glances" by H. Lane Wilson.

Rapee will conduct the orchestra in Beethoven's dramatic "Egmont" Overture; the Overture-Fantasy "Romeo and Juliet" by Tschakowsky, and the "Dances from Galantia" by the modern Hungarian master, Kodaly.

Jack "Two Gun" Benny, as daring a desperado as ever staged a holdup in a suspenseful factory, will present his parody version of the current screen classic, "Jesse James" during the broadcast over WEA Sunday at 7 p. m.

Benny will impersonate the reckless frontier bandit, Jesse James, during the broadcast over WEA Sunday at 7 p. m.

Andy Devine will play Jesse's elder brother, Frank, if he can grow a grey beard by broadcast time Sunday. The gravel-throated Thespians, who's sure the hirsute prop is the only thing that will make him look older than Jack, is sorry now that he used his paw-silly Van Dyke to stuff the sofa pillow he gave Jack for a birthday present last week.

Reese Hampton, of the Metropolitan Opera, will be initiated into "The Circle" Sunday, during the broadcast over WEA at 10 p. m.

Lawrence Tibbett, one of the charter members of the club, suggested to his fellow members that the Metropolitan's lovely soprano would be a fine addition to the roster. Miss Hampton, besides being one of the concert singers with the biggest box office draw, has a fine gift for comedy.

Groucho and Chico Marx, the Fousme and Robert Emmet Dolan's orchestra will be present for the initiation and also other members from "The Circle" list which includes Cary Grant, Carole Lombard and Basil Rathbone.

The Bandwagon will swing and sway with Sammy Kaye when it rolls out on WEA Sunday at 7:30 p. m. Kaye, who specializes in shining trombone phrases and mellow sax work, will be heard from the NBC station in Radio City.

A graduate civil engineer and a tree-letter man, in basketball, track and football, Sammy still maintains a training schedule that keeps him in prime physical condition. His first reputation as a radio maestro was gained at Cincinnati followed by engagements in Pittsburgh, Syracuse, Cleveland and New York. His arrangements for the most part are his own. One of his compositions, "Moon-dust," has gained widespread popularity. With Sammy will be featured soloists including Tommy Ryan, Charlie Wilson, Jimmy Brown and the Three Barons.

Amos 'n' Andy, in blackface makeup, will be the subjects of an experimental television pickup at the grounds of the New York World's Fair 1939 Sunday, the day before the famous NBC entertainment broadcast their half-hour description of the big show's wonders.

The experiment will mark two more "firsts" for Amos 'n' Andy—the first television experiment with a commercial program to come from the World's Fair grounds and the first time for the team ever to face a television camera. The experiment will take place Sunday at about noon and will be without an audience.

Book Reviews

Books Reviewed Here May Be Obtained At The Lima Public Library, Main Library

By MARY LATHROP
BEHOLD OUR LAND. By Russell Lord. Houghton, Mifflin Company. $3.00.

For three years the author traveled up and down the country interviewing farmers, and observing conditions. He writes now of what Americans have done to the soil, and what can be done in the future to stop soil erosion. South of the Ohio river there is a continuing waste of land going on today and the most difficult job is to get the complacent people to see that there is a problem involved. Russell Lord is a skilled journalist, and he uses his skill to get his vital story out to the people who ought to know about it. And the book is interesting no matter where you pick it up.

excitement if things are going too smoothly. Altogether it is a riotous bit of reading.

SAILOR ON HORSEBACK. By Irving Stone. Houghton, Mifflin Company. $3.00.

Jack London had a violently contradictory career of fantastic adventures and literary labors. His life story is almost as incredible as the most melodramatic fiction. In his own words, he wanted to "Live, and live abundantly, and delivered ice in his youth to eke out his stepfather's income, he joined the oyster pirates at 17, and then joined the gold rush to the Klondike. There he found the material for the stories of adventure for which the public clamored. He progressed until he became, "the highest paid, the best known and most popular writer in the world." But his spirit broke, he drank, his health declined and he finally committed suicide. Irving Stone has done an excellent job of biography writing.

Singing Star And Big Cast In State Hit

Deanna Durbin sings three numbers, written especially for her, and two celebrated classical offerings in the picture, "That Certain Age," at the State theatre.

The modern selections, all by Jimmy McHugh and a Harold Adamson, who composed the now famous "I Love to Whistle," hit song from "Mad About Music," are, "Be a Good Scout," a martial marching song, "My Own" and "You're as Pretty as a Picture."

Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet Waltz" from the opera, and "Les Filles Des Cadiz" by Leo Delibes, are the classical offerings.

A sixth number, which Deanna sings with Melvyn Douglas, featured with her in the production, is the old "Daisy, Daisy," better known as "A Bicycle Built for Two." Deanna sings the old favorite as the pair ride a tandem bicycle in one of the sequences of the picture.

Charles Previn, who has been in charge of the music of each of Deanna's pictures to date, acted in the same capacity on "That Certain Age."

With the famous fifteen-year-old singing star is seen a cast which includes, in addition to Melvyn Douglas, such players as Jackie Cooper, Irene Rich, who returns to the screen in this offering; Juanita Quigley, Nancy Carroll, Peggy Stewart, John Halliday and Charles Coleman. The picture was directed by Edward Ludwig.
