Hain't Got Pip; Hain't Got Flu

For followers of Izaak Walton, here's a bit from the Kentucky Sportsman:

"Hain't got no pip an' hain't got no flu!
All I need is a day er two
Far away from the haunts of men,
Where I kin be a boy again.
Winter is an awful drain,
On a feller's fishin' brain,
Makes a feller sorter pine
Fer the' wettin' of a line;
Dredful weary here erbout,
When he thinks of jumpin' trout;
Seems as tho' this very thing
Came ter me erlong last spring;
Felt right mean for a day or two,
Awful solumn, sad an' blue,
Twan't the pip and twan't the flu;
Jest that restlesslike an' mean
Longin' fer a laffin stream.
Gosh! I guess I'll turn erbout
An' go an' git my tackle out!
Glad I know jest what ter do.
Tain't the pip an' tain't the flu."

WOLVES FAITHFUL

The expression "lone wolf" is said to come from the fact that a wolf usually mates for life. Upon the death of its companion, an older male or female seldom mates again or joins a family group on forays.

Store Sponge Differs from Living Animal

The living sponge, fresh from the sea, has no resemblance to the sponge sold in stores. It is a solid, rather slimy-feeling body, varying in color from light grayish yellow through a considerable range of browns to black; and in shape it varies with the species, age, and habitat. In general appearance and consistency it is not unlike beef liver and is traversed by numerous chambers and canals.
