

Three Stars Hold Screen In Feature Offering At Quilna

Gay Comedy Playing At Sigma With Adventure Film Heading Program At Lyric Theatre

Victor Mature, Carole Landis and Betty Grable are the three feature stars of "Hot Spot," scheduled to commence Friday evening at the Quilna theatre. The film is a story of a girl taken out of a hash house and made the darling of cafe society. Films concluding with their showing Friday evening are "Harmon of Michigan," with Tom Harmon in the role of himself, and "Two Latins from Manhattan."

What happens when a spoiled bride decides to divorce her husband to marry another man and the husband begins a campaign to change her mind, makes for the gay comedy of "My Life With Caroline," Ronald Colman's latest film venture at the Sigma theatre. Anna Lee, blonde British favorite, has the feminine lead. Co-featured is "Dude Cowboy" starring Tim Holt.

Jack La Rue, Joan Woodbury and Vince Barnett have the lead roles of "Paper Bullets," a gangster adventure appearing Thursday at the Lyric theatre with Reglar Fellers. A juvenile comedy starring Billy Lee and Alfalfa Switzer. Also showing is an exciting chapter of the new serial, "Riders of Death Valley."

Erroll Flynn and Olivia de Havilland are the stars of the Ohio feature, "They Died With Their Boots On," a cinematic version of one of the most exciting chapters of American history. Flynn portrays the role of General George Custer, noted Indian fighter of the last century.

At the State theatre the film, "Parson of Panamint," stars Charles Ruggles in a drama of people who formed the communities of early western towns. William Boyd is the star of the Ohio feature, "Highway West," an adventure of the popular western character, Hop-a-long Cassidy.

Judy Canova heads the cast of "Sis Hopkins," rural comedy showing at the Majestic theatre with "Whirlwind Horseman."

OHIO
The current Ohio film, "They Died With Their Boots On," is the eighth picture in which Olivia de Havilland has been co-starred with Errol Flynn, and is also their most romantic love story. Custer and his wife, Beth Bacon Custer, were an ideal and happy couple. Their real-life love story is one of the most moving to be found in American history. Supporting the two stars is a large featured cast headed by Gene Lockhart, Charley Grapewin, Arthur Kennedy, Anthony Quinn, Sydney Greenstreet and Hattie McDaniel.

Because the story deals with history, and because many of its characters are real, it was not necessary for the studio to obtain War Department okay on the script. It has unofficial approval of the 7th Cavalry—Custer's Own—however, and a regular army man of long cavalry experience acted as technical advisor. He is Colonel J. E. Taylor.

Cavalrymen and cavalry mounts were available in numbers, but Indians were another matter. No studio executives reveal. To cast a sufficient number of authentic redmen for the battle scenes which is the climax of the picture, the Bureau of Indian Affairs had to be consulted. Affairs had to be consulted. Affairs had to be consulted. Affairs had to be consulted.

SIGMA
Ranking among the star's finest light comedy efforts, Ronald Colman's new vehicle at the Sigma, "My Life With Caroline," proves to be charming and ingenious film fare.

The plot deals in gay fashion with the efforts of a tolerant and understanding husband (Colman) to keep his butterfly wife from leaving him for various persuasive admirers. The wife means well, but she is susceptible to flattery and is easily convinced that she's neglected and misunderstood and that she'd be much happier married to the particular gentleman who intrigues her fancy at the moment.

With infinite tact and adroit maneuvering the husband manages to break up these inept affairs. His strategy comprises the delightful basis of the story and its many surprises. The British star, Anna Lee, makes her bow to American filmgoers as the vociferous wife, and her blonde loveliness and brilliant handling of the part guarantee her acceptance as a definite new asset. Hollywood's film offerings, Colman himself turns in a splendid but they have what talks in any language! The two girls are soon to be seen in "Two Latins from Manhattan," also at the Quilna.

LYRIC

"Reglar Fellers," opens Friday at the Lyric theatre, is a super-film collection of all the elements of down-to-earth entertainment.

Based on the comic strip by Gene Byrnes, the film gives a band of trouping youngsters the opportunity to show adult Hollywood how to act, and they certainly make the most of it.

It brings to life on the screen the antics and adventures of the 'gang' that has delighted the nation for a score of years, in a natural and plausible manner, and the kids enter into the spirit of the story with unforced zest.

It's hard to award acting laurels in such a universally-able company, but Billy Lee, Carl Alfalfa Switzer, and Buddy Bales are appealing as "Pinhead," "Bump," and "Dummy." Dugan, Standouts among the adults are Roscoe Ates, Sarah Padden, and Marguerite De La Motte.

In this picture the "Fellers" are busy winning quiz contests in order to finance their inventions and take care of the baby mascot in "Project 58," a baby carriage made out of a wash basket and sheets. As part of their program they succeed in regenerating the misanthropic grandmother of the child, winning her over to love the mascot and her daughter-in-law. With their "laboratory" of freakish inventions the kids also prevent a jewel theft by two big-city crooks.

One hilarious episode in the film is the test flight of "Project 59," a seagoing tank that does zip-ups in a public demonstration and then sinks rapidly. Other features are Pinhead's orchestra and the quiz program. As a picture with all-around appeal—comedy, drama, and music—"Reglar Fellers" is one you can take the whole family to see.

Others in the cast of "Reglar Fellers" are Netta Packer, Maren Mayo and Anna Ruth Hughes.

HONEY CALLED AID TO HEALTH BY PROFESSOR

(UP) — That honey may play an important part in national defense is the opinion of Prof. Linton B. Crandall of the University of Connecticut.

Prof. Crandall said he noticed the large number of draftees turned down because of physical defects. He said many of these defects are clearly traceable to diet deficiencies.

Food is too refined today, said the professor. With the increase in use of dehydrated sweets of all kinds, such as refined sugars from sugar cane, corn, beets and the maple trees; honey is the only unprocessed sweet left to man.

People in Europe, said Prof. Crandall, have known of centuries that honey will aid in physical development because of its many health-giving qualities.

He said that during the last war in the face of a sugar shortage the public had to use honey for sweetening purposes. He termed it regrettable that the American people did not continue this beneficial practice.

Said Prof. Crandall: "As the war clouds thicken, we may again turn to honey—the natural sweet."

SHIP LIMPS IN DESPITE THREE TORPEDO HITS UNUSUAL SHREW FOUND IN UTAH MOUNTAIN AREA

LONDON, Nov. 27 — (UP) — A German submarine commander decided that the British tanker Ensis would sink after he had fired three torpedoes at her, but the crew decided otherwise and sailed the ship 1,100 miles to Newfoundland.

And behind this voyage lies one of the most dramatic stories of the Battle of the Atlantic yet told. Wireless Operator Alan Gillett, one of the first members of the crew to reach England again, described how they were torpedoed without warning, and the men ordered to the boat.

When the boat had pulled clear, the U-boat rose from the water within 20 yards of them and, after inspecting the damage, fired two more torpedoes. Satisfied that the Ensis would sink, the German pulled in his periscope and dived.

Several hours later, members of the crew risked their lives to re-board the tanker for provisions and blankets, but next day the ship was still above water. Although her back seemed likely to break at any moment, the chief wireless operator repaired the transmitter and sent out an SOS.

When rescue ships arrived, the captain and crew decided to sail for Newfoundland—and eight days later they crept into the harbor at St. John's.

UNUSUAL SHREW FOUND IN UTAH MOUNTAIN AREA
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27 — (UP) — A California Academy of Sciences expedition into the Crag mountain area of Idaho found land snails, unknown to scientists and specimens of shrew, the smallest group of mammals in the world.

An adult specimen of shrew found by the explorers measured 2 1/2 inches in body length and 4 inches from nose to tip of tail. The group spent four weeks exploring and collecting specimens in the little-frequented area. During that period the scientists obtained 350 skins of birds or animals.

In addition to the shrew and land snails, other unusual discoveries were those of a spotted skunk never before seen so far north; five kinds of bats, and flying squirrels.

Elk, moose and bear were plentiful around the camp, which was 60 miles from the nearest town.
