

Students Visit Britannica Art Collection

With Prof. Robert L. Grilley of the University of Wisconsin, a group of art education students recently made a gallery tour of the Encyclopaedia Britannica collection of contemporary American art in Scanlan hall. Some of them are shown here. Left to right are Ardis Thvedt, Anne Holden, Bill Francis, Harold L. Krause, David Severson, Joel Salter, William Davis, and Grilley.

Today's Radio Highlights

Drama

7 p.m.—Cavalcade of America (WIBA): Tyrone Power in "The Giant Who Stopped Over the Mountain," story by John Sevier, who prevented bloodshed and became Tennessee's first governor. Newsstand Theater (WISC): "Gray Goose of Silence," folk-tale of woman who thwarts land-grabbers.

7:30 p.m.—Hollywood Theater (WIBA): Gary Merrill in "The Things Women Can Do," story of a wife who falsely accused of murder. Mr. and Mrs. North (WKOW): "Murder in a Minor Key."

8 p.m.—Family Doctor (WFOV): "Farewell to Johnnie."

9 p.m.—Meet Millie (WKOW): Audrey Totter in mixup over cheaply-purchased car. 9:30 p.m.—Playhouse on Broadway (WIBA): Lilli Palmer and Frederick Sauters. University of Pennsylvania senior in "The Philomel Cottage," Agatha Christie thriller.

Music

7:45 a.m.—George Morgan (WIBA): "Divorce Me C. O. D., 'Guitar Boogie,' 'Goodnight, Irene.'

11 a.m.—Eddy Arnold (WIBA): "Jealous Heart," "Two Wings on My Angel," "Trail of Aching Hearts." Jack Berch (WISC): Foster medley.

2:30 p.m.—Music You Want (WHA): "The Sorcerer's Apprentice."

3:30 p.m.—Music of the Masters (WHA): "Serenade to Music," Vaughan-Williams.

5:30 p.m.—Curt Massey (WBBM): "Slow Poke," "Undecided."

6:15 p.m.—Northerners (WGN): "The Wren," "Romance," "32 Feet and Eight Little Tails," "Martha" medley.

8:45 p.m.—Salvation Army Salute (WISC): Claramae Turner, Yvonne Chauvreaux, Eugene Conley, Y-Kivei Sze.

9 p.m.—FM Concert (WHA-FM): "Symphony No. 2," Mahler.

Discussion

1:30 p.m.—Talk Back (WISC): Dr. L. H. Evans, librarian of congress.

8 p.m.—America's Town Meeting (WISC): "Can Britain and America Reconcile Their Differences?" R. W. G. McKay, of Council of Europe. Rep. J. G. Fulton (R-Pa.). Dr. Sigfried Prager (WHA-FM): opera lecture.

Farm Programs

12:15 p.m.—Farm Service (WIBA): "The Fertility Contribution of Live Stock," Art Brehm, Colby, and Roy Ormond.

12:30 p.m.—Farm Parade (WKOW): Wisconsin's First Farm Paper, Einar Hammer. Farm Program (WHA): "Business Side of Farming," P. E. McNall.

For Children

9:30 a.m.—Growing Up (WHA): "Linda's Christmas Surprise."

1:30 p.m.—Let's Draw (WHA): "Picture Words."

9 p.m.—ABC Club (WISC): "Bozo at the Circus."

4:15 p.m.—The Kids Club (WIBA): a "Little Orley" story.

Miscellaneous

10 a.m.—Homemakers (WHA): "The Religious Theme in Decorations," Mrs. Irving Maurer; "General Trends in Clothing and Textiles," Mrs. Grace Grockopf, Emma Jordre.

2:15 p.m.—House Party (WKOW): "Bake-Off" contest.

7 p.m.—People Are Funny (WBBM): Art Linkletter seeks wise investor.

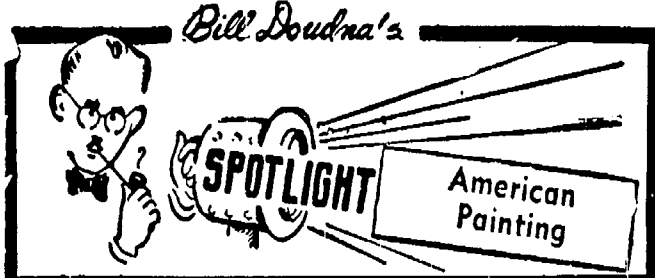

8:15 p.m.—Excursions in Science (WFOV): "Modern Food Research."

Sports

5:45 p.m.—Sports Parade (WIBA): with Jim Van Dine, former Badger basketball and baseball star.

WFOV-FM

104.1 Meas. TUESDAY
A. M.
6:00 Early Risers
7:00 News: Yawn Patrol
7:15 Weather Report
7:30 Yawn Patrol
7:45 Layman's Call to Prayer
8:00 News: Clockwatchers
8:15 Weather Report
8:30 Clockwatchers
8:45 Stars Sing
9:00 Dance Band
9:15 Morning Musical Variety
9:30 Show Tune
9:45 Novelty Shop
10:00 Old Timers Hall
11:30 Navy Band

TIP O' THE MORNING: "Alice in Wonderland" will be the "Radio Theater" (CBS-WBBM) attraction on Christmas Eve.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica collection of contemporary American painting is now on exhibition in Scanlan hall of the Madison Vocational and Adult school. The show, sponsored by the Madison Art assn., is reviewed here by Robert L. Grilley, professor of art education and award-winning Madison painter.

By ROBERT L. GRILLEY

In choosing its collection, the Encyclopaedia Britannica apparently concerned itself with a retrospective view of American painting over the last 20 years. Many of the works represent the older group of contemporary artists whose craftsmanship and virtuosity of brushwork give the show a certain sumptuous quality.

The summary nature of the collection has resulted in a relatively conservative assemblage, emphasizing a fastidious control of recognizable form and substance.

The expertly handled seascapes, "March, North Atlantic," by Frederick Waugh, makes this point. It is a cool distillation of the somewhat more robust, nineteenth century giant, Winslow Homer. "My Model," by Leon Kroll, does so to us from the French academy, reservedly modern as Puvion de Chavanne.

Kenneth Hayes Miller also reflects a studied reverence for the classical world in his Raphael-like figures skating in Central park. The large, elegantly drawn "After the Masque" by Robert Brackman employs figures as Cezanne still life objects, painted in darker and dryer color than that of the master.

Continuing in the French aspect, Raphael Sotter reveals a gentle and sensitive compassion for their people as he arranges their texture and faded color into a handsome picture, "Window Shoppers," while Louis Bouche enjoys life, food taste, and a rare sense of humor, painting from the visual experience directly, and with unsurpassed economy. You will like his "Barber Shop," Nicolai Klavsky, in "The Brick Carrier" is close to Bouche's in this respect.

On the other hand, Frederick Taubes insists that you consider his masterful brushwork in "Portrait of a Painter" to an extent that it becomes a self-conscious performance as well as a painting. In a more unassuming manner, Francis Spaight brings us a remarkably luminous composition of grays and smoky whites. His "Tracks in Winter" is an exceptionally honest and direct presentation of familiar subject material, without a trace of swag.

Among the narrative canvases in the show, "Guerrillas" by Joseph Hirsch demands attention. He describes, in a frankly illustrational technique, the epic nobility of the individual refusing to be crushed by superior force. Hirsch worked extensively during the second world war as an outstanding poster artist and war correspondent. Considerably less successful is Loren Barton's painterly platitude, "Pacific," which is an unfortunate mixture of assumed sophistication, and complete naivete, executed in overly clean color. Another story picture, Louis Bosa's "War Bride," is delightfully humorous upon close examination, but rather formless from any distance.

Considering the total effect of the show, its color, with several notable exceptions, is low-keyed by immediately contemporary standards. There are no struzzle paintings, none accomplished with masking tape and four-hour enamel, nor amorphous turpentine washes of the current rebels. One does regret, however, that such modern color masters as Abraham

Rattner, Karl Zerbe, and Robert Gwathmey are no longer touring with the group.

The show is not without several bold ventures in color, though. Richard Haines stands somewhat apart from the rest with his intense but remarkably adjusted "Blue Morning." You will seldom see so much violet-blue, so well contained in a medium-sized picture space. Even Julio deDiego's powerful color in "They Shall Sail the Seven Seas" has assumed a more traditional museum tone through its amber varnish.

Regardless of your preferences, you ought not to miss a show of this magnitude. Your appetite will not be satiated, but rather, stimulated. If a modest number of works have been well enjoyed, you will look forward earnestly to and complete naivete, executed in overly clean color. Another story picture, Louis Bosa's "War Bride," is delightfully humorous upon close examination, but rather formless from any distance.

Considering the total effect of the show, its color, with several notable exceptions, is low-keyed by immediately contemporary standards. There are no struzzle paintings, none accomplished with masking tape and four-hour enamel, nor amorphous turpentine washes of the current rebels. One does regret, however, that such modern color masters as Abraham

Continuing in the French aspect, Raphael Sotter reveals a gentle and sensitive compassion for their people as he arranges their texture and faded color into a handsome picture, "Window Shoppers," while Louis Bouche enjoys life, food taste, and a rare sense of humor, painting from the visual experience directly, and with unsurpassed economy. You will like his "Barber Shop," Nicolai Klavsky, in "The Brick Carrier" is close to Bouche's in this respect.

On the other hand, Frederick Taubes insists that you consider his masterful brushwork in "Portrait of a Painter" to an extent that it becomes a self-conscious performance as well as a painting. In a more unassuming manner, Francis Spaight brings us a remarkably luminous composition of grays and smoky whites. His "Tracks in Winter" is an exceptionally honest and direct presentation of familiar subject material, without a trace of swag.

Among the narrative canvases in the show, "Guerrillas" by Joseph Hirsch demands attention. He describes, in a frankly illustrational technique, the epic nobility of the individual refusing to be crushed by superior force. Hirsch worked extensively during the second world war as an outstanding poster artist and war correspondent. Considerably less successful is Loren Barton's painterly platitude, "Pacific," which is an unfortunate mixture of assumed sophistication, and complete naivete, executed in overly clean color. Another story picture, Louis Bosa's "War Bride," is delightfully humorous upon close examination, but rather formless from any distance.

Considering the total effect of the show, its color, with several notable exceptions, is low-keyed by immediately contemporary standards. There are no struzzle paintings, none accomplished with masking tape and four-hour enamel, nor amorphous turpentine washes of the current rebels. One does regret, however, that such modern color masters as Abraham

Continuing in the French aspect, Raphael Sotter reveals a gentle and sensitive compassion for their people as he arranges their texture and faded color into a handsome picture, "Window Shoppers," while Louis Bouche enjoys life, food taste, and a rare sense of humor, painting from the visual experience directly, and with unsurpassed economy. You will like his "Barber Shop," Nicolai Klavsky, in "The Brick Carrier" is close to Bouche's in this respect.

On the other hand, Frederick Taubes insists that you consider his masterful brushwork in "Portrait of a Painter" to an extent that it becomes a self-conscious performance as well as a painting. In a more unassuming manner, Francis Spaight brings us a remarkably luminous composition of grays and smoky whites. His "Tracks in Winter" is an exceptionally honest and direct presentation of familiar subject material, without a trace of swag.

Among the narrative canvases in the show, "Guerrillas" by Joseph Hirsch demands attention. He describes, in a frankly illustrational technique, the epic nobility of the individual refusing to be crushed by superior force. Hirsch worked extensively during the second world war as an outstanding poster artist and war correspondent. Considerably less successful is Loren Barton's painterly platitude, "Pacific," which is an unfortunate mixture of assumed sophistication, and complete naivete, executed in overly clean color. Another story picture, Louis Bosa's "War Bride," is delightfully humorous upon close examination, but rather formless from any distance.

Considering the total effect of the show, its color, with several notable exceptions, is low-keyed by immediately contemporary standards. There are no struzzle paintings, none accomplished with masking tape and four-hour enamel, nor amorphous turpentine washes of the current rebels. One does regret, however, that such modern color masters as Abraham

Continuing in the French aspect, Raphael Sotter reveals a gentle and sensitive compassion for their people as he arranges their texture and faded color into a handsome picture, "Window Shoppers," while Louis Bouche enjoys life, food taste, and a rare sense of humor, painting from the visual experience directly, and with unsurpassed economy. You will like his "Barber Shop," Nicolai Klavsky, in "The Brick Carrier" is close to Bouche's in this respect.

On the other hand, Frederick Taubes insists that you consider his masterful brushwork in "Portrait of a Painter" to an extent that it becomes a self-conscious performance as well as a painting. In a more unassuming manner, Francis Spaight brings us a remarkably luminous composition of grays and smoky whites. His "Tracks in Winter" is an exceptionally honest and direct presentation of familiar subject material, without a trace of swag.

Among the narrative canvases in the show, "Guerrillas" by Joseph Hirsch demands attention. He describes, in a frankly illustrational technique, the epic nobility of the individual refusing to be crushed by superior force. Hirsch worked extensively during the second world war as an outstanding poster artist and war correspondent. Considerably less successful is Loren Barton's painterly platitude, "Pacific," which is an unfortunate mixture of assumed sophistication, and complete naivete, executed in overly clean color. Another story picture, Louis Bosa's "War Bride," is delightfully humorous upon close examination, but rather formless from any distance.

Considering the total effect of the show, its color, with several notable exceptions, is low-keyed by immediately contemporary standards. There are no struzzle paintings, none accomplished with masking tape and four-hour enamel, nor amorphous turpentine washes of the current rebels. One does regret, however, that such modern color masters as Abraham

Continuing in the French aspect, Raphael Sotter reveals a gentle and sensitive compassion for their people as he arranges their texture and faded color into a handsome picture, "Window Shoppers," while Louis Bouche enjoys life, food taste, and a rare sense of humor, painting from the visual experience directly, and with unsurpassed economy. You will like his "Barber Shop," Nicolai Klavsky, in "The Brick Carrier" is close to Bouche's in this respect.

Radio Timetable

TUESDAY

	WIBA 1310 kc	WISC 1480 kc	WKOW 1070 kc	WIBU 1240 kc
6:00	Sunrise	Top of the Morning	Uncle Julius Farm Hour	Silent
6:15	Prole	Top of the Morning	Chapel in Air	Silent
6:30	Musical	Top of the Morning: News	Weather: Markets	Silent Roundup
6:45	Alex Dreier	Top of Morning	Land Use	News: Farm Service
7:00	Musical Clock	News	Weather: Coffee Club: News	News: Weather
7:15	Journal: News	Top of Morning		News: Farm Service
7:30	George Morgan	Pauline Fenn		News: Weather
8:00	Musical	Breakfast Club	Market: Coffee Club: News	Ilav. Peterson
8:15	Musical	Breakfast Club	Kitchen Club: Coffee Club: News	Musical Clock
8:30	News			Musical Clock
8:45	News			Musical Clock
9:00	Welcome	My True Story	Arthur Godfrey	Army News
9:15	Travelers	Breakfast Club	Arthur Godfrey	News: Martin
9:30	Betty Carr, Col'm	Against Stork		Sweet Music
9:45	Trading Post
10:00	Strike It Rich	Ladies Fair: News	Arthur Godfrey	Women's News
10:15	Strike It Rich	Queen for a Day	Music Speaks L. Mortenson	Musical Variety
10:30	Betty Carr			Mid-Morning Matinee
10:45	Dave Garroway
11:00	Eddy Arnold	Jack Berch	News: Jenny Helen Trent	News: Matinee
11:15	Magic in Music	Victor Lindhart	Our Gal Sunday	Headlines
11:30	Farm	Sweetpeaks		Farm and Home
11:45	Roundup	News: Quiz		Farm News
12:00	News Roundup	Curt Massey	Uncle Julius	Musical: Markets
12:15	Farm Service	News	Market: Farm Parade	News
12:30	News	Mister Music		News: Markets
12:45	Folk Party			Farm and Home
1:00	Double or Nothing	Break the Bank	Social Security	Farm Service
1:15	Nothing	Talk Back	Shoppers to Mus.	Headlines
1:30	Nothing	Dick Haymes	H. Hays and Harper	Daughter
1:45	Matinee			Chn'n Science
2:00	Life Beautiful	Mister Music	News of 1970	Music
2:15	Road of Life	Mister Music	House Party: C. Adams	Booth
2:30	Pepper Young	News: Quiz	Variety Time	Musical
2:45	Right to Hap's	Evelyn Winters		U. S. Navy
3:00	Backstage Wife	Mister Music	Luella Mortenson	Chapel in
3:15	Stella Dallas	Mister Music	Forbidden Diary	The Sky
3:30	Wilder Brown	To the Ladies		Hour
3:45	Woman in House
4:00	Just Plain Bill	ABC Club	Mary Cane's	Melody
4:15	Front P. Farrell	Santa Claus	Showcases	Hour
4:30	Lorenzo Jones	Claus	Harmony	News
4:45	Kids' Club	Uncle Dick	House	Radio Parade
5:00	Santa Claus	Sgt. Preston	News: Final scores	Fiesta Time
5:15	Fiesta Time	Ed the Yukon	Madison's	University
5:30	News	King: Sports	Top Tunes	Special
5:45	Sports: News			Only Special
6:00	Dinner	News: Serenade		News
6:15	Melody: News	Pulton Lewis	Dinner Music	Old Time Band
6:30	News: Melody	Mister Mercury	M. E. R. Murrow	Sports Time
6:45	1 Man's Family			Bing Sings
7:00	Cavalcade of America	Newsstand Theater	Favorite Story	Serenade
7:15	Hollywood Theater	Change of a Lifetime	Mr. and Mrs. North	News
7:30				Old Times' Jamboree
8:00	Bob Hines	America's Town Meeting	Life With Lauri	Old Times' Jamboree
8:15	Fibber McGee and Molly	Army Salute	"First" Guy Lombardo Orch	Old Times' Jamboree
8:30
8:45
9:00	Big Town	Mysterious Traveler	Meet Millie Dorsey	University
9:15	Playhouse on Broadway	Happy Holiday	Contest	Farm Hour
9:30		Elmer Davis		News: At Your Request
9:45
10:00	News	News	News	At Your Request
10:15	News of World	Frank Edwards	Sports	At Your Request
10:30	Christmas	Grantland Rice Stars	Some of the Best
10:45	Show Window
11:00	News: 1310	News: Ed	News: Jimmy	Silent
11:15	Club	Silvers	Dorsey Orch.	Silent
11:30	Dance	Show: News	Silvers Orchestra	Silent
11:45	Orch.: News			Silent

* Starred programs are also carried on corresponding FM station.
F M channels: WIBA 98.1, WISC 101.5, WKOW 98.1, WIBU 94.9 M.