

TIP OF THE MORNING:
"Club 15" will leave the air soon, but one of its stars—Bob Crosby—already is considering offers to do a similar show for new sponsor, Hollywood hears.

ALMOST 300 University of Wisconsin students and faculty members presented music from Handel's "The Messiah" Tuesday night in the Wisconsin Union theater, attracting a capacity audience.

Much of the performance was of high calibre, but much of it was below the high standards to which J. Russell Paxton, the director, and others of the large company had accustomed their audiences.

Because the second part was far superior in almost every respect to the first, one must believe that the cause of the imperfections was inadequate rehearsal. Until a point near the end of the first portion—the chorus, "Glory to God in the Highest," to be exact—the Paxton polish was missing a good deal of the time.

Nevertheless, the University of Wisconsin chorus had excellent balance, first-rate tone, and fine diction throughout the program. The usual high quality of Paxton's conducting came through in the quiet, tender passages—a rare thing in a chorus so large.

A special bonus must go to the men of the chorus for their work in such difficult sections as "All We Like Sheep," with florid passages which are hard enough for a soloist, to say nothing of some 60 voices.

Donn Weiss was the standout among the soloists, soon overcoming a huskiness which for a time overshadowed the basic richness and warmth of his voice, but which did not interfere with his facile handling of his solos.

Irma Reynolds Lyon, contralto, gave a glowing reading of "He Shall Feed His Flocks" and "He Was Despoiled," and Christine Gunlaugson showed an unexpected depth of voice in "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" in contrast with earlier solos, keyed higher.

Keith Macy's tenor had a pleasant lyric quality combined with a feeling for drama, but he lacked the staying power needed in Handel. Accompaniment was by members of the University Symphony orchestra, who played with crisp tone, which should have been matched by crisp delivery and who didn't seem quite sure of themselves, and by Mrs. Paxton, again proving herself a solid musician.

Another performance of "The Messiah"—this one by the Madison Civic chorus will be given at 8:30 p. m. Sunday in the Masonic auditorium.

City Ends Tenth Year Without Traffic Death
PORT WASHINGTON, Wis. (UP)—The city of Port Washington Tuesday started its 11th year of traffic safety, after going 10 straight years without a traffic death.

Police Chief Otto Blumenthal said the last fatality in the city was on Dec. 15, 1942, when a hit-and-run driver killed a pedestrian.
