FOR THE LAST few years, "Dragnet" has replayed its highly popular ".22 Rifle for Christmas" as a Christmas feature. This story of a boy who receives a rifle as a gift and accidentally shoots a young friend has become famous as a safety message.

This year, Jack Webb's mail carried many requests for another repetition on the series heard at 8 p.m. Tuesdays over NBC-WIBA.

But the creator of Joe Friday wanted to do a program more symbolic of the Christmas spirit. Let NBC continue the story:

"Webb's delving into police records and his work with law enforcement officers drove him to feel that something was needed—at least once a year — to bring a message of faith and brotherly love into the homes of millions of Americans.

"Production No. 999, titled simply "The Christmas Story" was his answer. The original incident around which the story evolved was true—but so shrouded in hearsay that it had become almost a legend. Webb finally traced it. The 'Dragnet' Christmas program for tonight actually happened in Our Lady of Victory church in San Francisco in the year 1930. Insisting on authenticity, Webb brought in the parish priest, the Rev. Louis Le Bihan, to Hollywood to serve as technical advisor on the film.

"Not everyone agreed that 'The Christmas Story' was 'Dragnet' material. There were those who thought that Joe Friday should stay on familiar ground, that the program belonged in the stark, cold atomsphere of police headquarters with the scarred furniture and bare, blank walls — but Webb felt differently.

"One night, shortly before the recording of 'Christmas Story,' Webb went down to the site he had selected — Our Lady Queen of Angels church, an historic old adobe church which had been founded on the original El Camino Real in 1784. The church, rebuilt in 1861, stands across from the old plaza, once the center of the tiny Spanish village that later became Los Angeles.

"He watched parishoners step inside and take their places in pews or at the altar rail, saw them as they prayed and made offerings, studied their faces, calm with faith and reverence. Webb saw Mexican boys in leather jackets, old men and young women with colorful scarves tied about their heads. There were children, too, some of them in native costumes with gay serapes thrown over white shirts and colorful trousers. He noticed the businessmen and fashionably dressed girls who had passed through the always-open door to spend a few moments in prayer at the end of a busy day.

"Webb knew, then, that he had the story he wanted. This was America, Christmas, 1953. The quotation from Matthew posted in the courtyard outside read: 'Could You Not Watch One Hour With Me?' And under that were the words: 'No class or racial distinction of any kind tolerated.' In the peace and quiet of the church with its flickering candles and the scent of fresh flowers, he had found the setting he was looking for.

"Here he'd do a program that would truly tell a Christmas story . . . a story of how men could learn to live together in peace and happiness in a world where no one like Joe Friday would have to show his badge again."

Work Starts on U. S. Education Center

WASHINGTON (AP)— The National Education Association Monday announced the start of work on the first unit of a new $5,000,000 education center to be built in Washington.

The building will cost $1,315,000 and should be completed in about one year.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

"Christmas is coming," said West, "so I'll take any little gift that's handed to me."

It must have been a mistake for West to accept the trick that was handed to him as a "gift," since otherwise I wouldn't be commenting upon it. Nevertheless, I wonder how many of my readers would refuse the trick.

West opened a low heart, properly enough, and East took the ace. East continued the suit, and South ruffed. Declarer led a trump to dummy's ace, continued with the king of trumps, and led the queen of trumps, hoping for a 3-3 break.

East discarded a heart on the third round of trumps, and South paused for reflection. He had only one trump left, and he couldn't afford to draw West's last trump with the clubs still far from established.

South therefore left the last trump out and switched to clubs. He cashed the ace and king of clubs, smiling with relief when the queen dropped on the second round. He then led a low club toward's dummy's jack.

It was at this point that West triumphantly produced the five of spades to ruff dummy's jack of clubs. He was sure that South had forgotten all about this little trump, and West wanted to take the gift while he could.

West then led his last heart, and South ruffed with his last trump. Declarer ran his two remaining clubs and ended by leading a diamond towards dummy's king.

West could take the ace, but he couldn't prevent dummy from winning declarer's 10th trick with the king of diamonds.

West was still happy over the gift that had been handed to him. He was sure that South would have made 11 tricks instead of only 10 if he hadn't "forgotten" about the lowly five of trumps. But West was quite wrong.

Suppose West had discarded a diamond instead of ruffing dummy's jack of clubs. How would declarer get out of dummy? He certainly couldn't afford to lead a diamond away from dummy's king.

If he led a heart (the only remaining choice), he would have to ruff with his last trump. West would then be able to ruff the next club, and South would never make his fifth club. Dummy would have to lose two of the three diamonds, and South would be down one.
