Bills at Local Theaters

Twentieth Century-Fox's Cinemascope drama of the great Southwest in the 1880's, "Broken Lance," now playing at the Loew's Poli theater. Spencer Tracy, Robert Wagner, Jean Peters and Richard Widmark are the stars and Katy Jurado, Mexican cinema star, has an important role in this action-packed film. The scenic beauty of the Santa Cruz valley in Arizona near the Mexican border where the outdoor scenes were filmed is stunningly reproduced in color by Broken Lance as one of the finest westerns to be seen here in a long time.

Co-feature on the new bill will be "Corilla at Large," a suspenseful murder mystery backgrounded with the gaudy trappings of an amusement park.

Goliath has his title role in the Paragon film, produced in Technicolor, with Cameron Mitchell, Anne Bancroft, Lee J. Cobb, Raymond Burr and Charlotte Austin featured.

"Ring of Fear" at Warner. There is an unrehearsed dramatic scene in "Ring of Fear," which was picked up by the Cinemascope camera, which shows an aerialist plunging from a high perch.

For a scene in the picture Sean McClory, the ringmaster, had just announced an act with aerialist Victoria Renford. The blonde performer was climbing upwards to a high trapeze with no net beneath her. She was about 20 feet up when she lost her grip and fell. A quick-acting crew member caught her just before she hit the ring. The Cinemascope camera recorded the awesome scene.

Cinemascope Film Here. "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," a Cinemascope film in color is showing now at the Majestic theater.

Starred in this vibrant production are: Jane Powell and Howard Keel Joining them are: Jeff Richards, Russ Tamblyn and Tommy Hall.

Sung and heard are: "When You're in Love," "Bless Your Beautiful Hide," "Goin' Co'lin," "Wonderful, Wonderful Day," "Sobbin' Women," "Spring, Spring, Spring," "June Bride" and "Lament."

Miss Powell in this film falls in love with Howard Keel and they must keep house and cook for them.

To test out this situation Miss Powell decides to get the boys married off.

DIANA LYNN, who was complaining a couple of years back that Hollywood wasn't permitting her to grow up, has finally crossed over the bridge.

It's a mature, womanly Diana in "Track of the Cat," with all cuteness and glamor barred. And she's shooting:

"This is what I've wanted. I was a miserable idiot actress at one time in my career. I was getting to the point where I didn't like myself. I'd better get out of Hollywood for a while and do something about it. I've worked hard on the stage and in TV. Now I think there's a big improvement. It took three years to get this kind of role. Before that it was the kind of stuff that anybody could do. Audiences aren't putting up with bad stories and dumb acting any more."

"YOU START OUT as a heavy in Hollywood today and it's tough to make the switch to the hero side. Maybe it was easy in the days when Clark Gable and George Raft began. Today they won't take a chance on you."

That's handsome, rugged Lee Van Cleef talking. He has clippings from the critics to prove that there's a press section rooting for him to swap villainy for chivalry. He worries about the problem of using skullduggery as a rocket to stardom. Right now he's in RKO's "The Conqueror."

Lee, a former public accountant in Somerset, N. Y., was spotted by Stanley Kramer in the road company of "Mr. Roberts" and given his first break as a heel in "High Noon."

Now he's thinking he should have waited for a chance to make his movie bow as a hero.

"It's difficult to get out of the rut," he says. "I want to see it happen, though, before my kids begin to wonder if all I do is whip horses and kill people."

LOOKING AT LIFE

By ERICH BRANDEIS

One of these days I am going to make a survey to find out just what percentage of her time the average housewife spends in her kitchen preparing meals for the family.

Nine times out of 10 if you drop in on any home during the day you'll find the woman of the house in the kitchen doing something that pertains to cooking or to feeding her brood.

If it isn't dinner it's breakfast or lunch. If that is done, then the kids want a snack. And I don't even want to talk about washing the dishes. My own experience with that form of a woman's entertainment is too painful.

Incidentally, and this has nothing to do with the case, one thing our American women can be glad of is that they don't have to prepare meals like Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas ate on his vacation in Australia recently.

For breakfast he had scrambled turtle eggs; for lunch stuffed walrus—a type of kangaroo—and for dinner, flying fox.

No, what I want to tell you is that maybe in the not too far distant future you will be able to get all your meals out of test tubes, and those meals will do you as much good as the choicest steak.

According to the Nutritional Review, scientists are now working on perfecting meals out of a unicellular plant called chlorella.

Unfortunately, you won't be able to grow chlorella plants in your garden or in the field, but there will be 15 tons of protein and more than two tons of fat in the equivalent of every acre of chlorella.

But it isn't only chlorella the scientists are concerned about. With the ever increasing population of this earth we may soon—by "soon" they mean in a few thousand years—be so short of the kind of foods that we can't even afford to HAVE resort to artificial foods.

So the scientists are extending their studies to cows and steers to see what converts woody fodder to milk and those delicious steaks, all your meals out of test tubes, in the hope that they will some day be able to produce these things better than nature is doing—and certainly, I hope, more cheaply.

Sometimes I think that a person could go just on crazy reading about all these new-fangled ideas about housekeeping, about eating, about medicine, about smoking and about all the other things that are to be good or bad for us.

A member of the British House of Commons anxiously asked for a government report on the relation between smoking and health.

The British Health Minister, Ian Macleod, turned him down, saying that there were dozens of these reports published already.

"I recommend," he concluded, "to the anxious M. P., if he is a heavy smoker and concerned about the connection between cancer and smoking, that he give up reading."

Unfortunately, what the Health Minister said, also applies to this column. In the first place, I have a stack of books that I can't read for 50 years yet. In the second place, I doubt that husbands will ever want to eat them.

So the best thing I can recommend is to disregard this scientific article altogether—and get ready for your next meal.
